

North Palm Beach, Florida

I am a Good Sam member and have been asked by other Good Sam members in the neighborhood to reach out to the council for some help. Our goal is to get the city to back off of selective code enforcement against RV's and not equal enforcing for boats.

It appears that after many years, that North Palm Beach, (NPB) has decided to start restricting RV that is over 10' and 30' long.

The code apparently has been around for many years, but has never been enforced. 4 years ago they quoted "they were outdated and boats and RV are all taller these days".

Before I purchased my Revolution, I went to the city to see what was required, and permitted and built to spec the fence, concrete swale access and really went all out with tie downs etc. No problems till yesterday.

So now I have received a call asking to come measure my rig, and the same officer that inspected 3-4 years ago stated, now NPB is enforcing the 10' rule. I ask what about the boat and she stated the village is only concerned with RV's.

Well there are 100's if not thousands of us RV folk, that have constructed all the required screening. Now they are moving the ball and only on a select few?

In just walking 2 blocks yesterday afternoon we have about 20 people with RV that will become in violation if we don't act quick. All are understandably disappointed and ready to fight for our rights that we have had for decades.

This is a boating community and the decision to only enforce the code on RV vs. Boats is really wrong. I have both on the same property and only the only city concern is the RV? That is clear discrimination.

The RV industry is having enough challenges and we certainly don't want to drive many more of us out due to government regulations.

Many of could afford to move to a storage place, but a whole lot of my elderly neighbors on fixed income cannot.
